Dear Strom:

How very thoughtful of you to inscribe, autograph and frame the September 6 New York Times Magazine cover for me. It was a very nice surprise!

I think David Eisenhower did a good job, and I'm very pleased with the way the article developed.

Again, thank you for thinking of me in such a nice way, and for your constant help and support.

With warm regards,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Bantle:

I wanted to express my regrets at being unable to attend the National Advisory Board meeting on Tuesday, September 15. I understand you had a good group in the Roosevelt Room. The President told me he enjoyed his meeting with you.

The task you have taken on for the NRCC is an important one. I am glad we have such loyal supporters like you who are willing to do what is needed for a successful election cycle in 1988. I have asked Guy to keep me apprised of the Board's activities.

Good luck to you and thank you for everything you are doing.

It was good to hear from you.

I was greatly honored by the naming of the chair at McCallie after me. I went to McCallie and made a brief and thoroughly unremarkable speech. But I enjoyed the day and the chance to visit with a few of our classmates.

Dear Mr. Dixon:

Thank you for your inquiry regarding National Association of Counties v. James A. Baker, III. The issue presented in this case is whether the Secretary of the Treasury is obligated to disburse to local governmental units nearly $180 million in General Revenue Sharing funds (representing 4.3% of the FY 1986 appropriation) which were sequestered under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings before the revenue-sharing program was terminated by Congress.

As you may know, the Federal government has filed a notice of appeal of the ruling by Judge Green. Please be assured that the matter of whether this case should be appealed received the closest scrutiny among the pertinent agencies, the Civil Division at the Department of Justice, and the Office of the Solicitor General. Wherever possible the Federal government strives to resolve harmoniously conflicts with State and local governmental units. There are, however, instances where the conflict is unavoidable, especially when a significant amount of money is at stake and the Justice Department's review of the law found abundant support for the Secretary of the Treasury's action.

We are doing everything we can to assure that this issue is resolved expeditiously, by agreeing with counsel for the local governments to file an early notice of appeal and to request jointly of the U.S. Court of Appeals that it hear this case by the end of the year.

Thank you for sharing your concerns.

Dear John:

I want to apologize for the delay in responding to your letter on legislation concerning the banking laws and recapitalizing the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC). As you know, because of the overriding need to recapitalize the FSLIC, the President approved H.R. 27 on August 10.

We fully share your concerns about Title II of H.R. 27 and opposed it during Congressional deliberations on the measure. In our view, regulated financial institutions should be permitted to engage in activities that are currently closed to them and thereby compete more effectively with unregulated firms that engage in similar activities without restriction. In this regard, the Administration proposed in 1983 comprehensive legislation that would have largely deregulated the non-banking activities of bank and thrift holding companies (e.g., by permitting insurance underwriting and brokering).

By restricting, instead of expanding, the activities in which depository institutions may permissibly engage, Title II of H.R. 27 is directly contrary to the Administration's policy. When the President approved this legislation, he said that his "willingness to sign this bill is based in part upon [a] statement of congressional intent not to renew or extend the moratorium on the granting of needed new authorities for banks beyond March 1, 1988. . . ." By that time, we hope that the Congress will present the President with a comprehensive measure consistent with the pro-competitive, pro-consumer legislation the Administration has long sought.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,
