Berlin Wall

The Berlin Wall was erected in 1961 by the East German Government as a barrier to separate communist-controlled East Germany and democratic West Germany. The East German government was concerned that people were fleeing East Germany to live in the free and more prosperous western section of the city. East and West Germans were not allowed to cross the border into the other side of the city. Citizens trying to escape from East Germany to West Germany could be shot without warning. Until the Berlin Wall was demolished in 1989, families were often kept apart from each other by the concrete wall, barbed wire, and guard posts.

This section of the Berlin Wall on the Ruwe Terrace weighs 6338 pounds and stands 9 ½ feet tall. There are only about a half dozen Berlin Wall sections of this size in the U.S.
