Biography

Biography

Carlton E. Turner is a chemist, an expert on marijuana, the former "drug czar" for the Reagan Administration; and the leader of several drug testing firms.

Dr. Carlton E. Turner was born in Choctaw County, Alabama on September 14, 1940. He graduated from the University of Southern Mississippi, earning a bachelor's degree in chemistry and master's and doctoral degrees in organic chemistry. Turner became one of the nation's leading experts on the botany and pharmacology of marijuana. Dr. Turner has published a wide range of articles and books on the study of marijuana and other drugs and the prevention of drug abuse.

Before joining the Reagan Administration, Turner headed the Marijuana Research Project at the University of Mississippi. He served in the University's Research Institute for Pharmaceutical Studies, becoming Director of the Institute in 1980. He also worked as a consultant for government agencies and private firms in the United States, Mexico, and Canada, as well as for the United Nations.

Turner's approach to the U.S. drug abuse problem included building up enforcement efforts, making marijuana and cocaine a priority, not just heroin, and establishing an education and prevention program. His philosophy was similar to the approach of both President Reagan and White House Counsellor Edwin Meese to the problem of drug abuse. He was hired in July 1981 as a Senior Policy Advisor for Drug Abuse out of the White House Office of Policy Development. Turner was quickly promoted in 1982 to the Director of the Drug Abuse Policy Office.

As Turner led the study group that formulated the administration's legislative package to fight illegal drugs and came up with Reagan's executive order on the subject, his visibility grew. He often traveled with First Lady Nancy Reagan when she toured her "Just Say No" campaign. So in 1983, he was again promoted to Special Assistant to the President for Drug Abuse Policy and eventually to Deputy Assistant to the President for Drug Abuse in March 1985.

Throughout his six years fighting drug abuse, Turner served as the President's adviser for drug abuse policy and assisted both he and First Lady Nancy Reagan with domestic and international drug abuse education projects. During his time, the Office of Drug Abuse Policy produced two policy books on U.S. Drug Abuse Policy in 1982 and 1984.

Turner was known for his focus on the law enforcement side of drug abuse policy. It was his first priority and fit in with soon-to-be Attorney General Edwin Meese's approach. Turner was very comfortable with law enforcement agencies and increased the involvement of the FBI, and the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) in the overall drug abuse policy. Turner believed strongly that prevention of drug use is more effective than treatment of drug addiction.

In 1987, Turner became President and Chief Executive Officer of Princeton Diagnostic Laboratories of America, a biomedical and pharmaceutical testing laboratory. In 1994, he joined Carrington Laboratories, where he served as Executive Vice President for Scientific Affairs, and then as Chief Operating Officer. He became President and CEO of Carrington Laboratories in April 1995. Carrington Laboratories changed its name to DelSite, Inc. in June 2008. Turner retired from his position as President and CEO of DelSite on December 31, 2008.

Turner currently resides in Florida and was involved in the 2014 Florida referendum, Amendment 2, on expanding and providing easier access to medical marijuana. A significant donor to the Republican party, Mel Sembler, set up a political action committee opposed to the referendum. He chose Turner to lead this PAC. The referendum needed a super majority to pass (60%+) but did not receive this amount and did not pass. It was resubmitted to the Florida voters in 2016 and passed.

Scope and Content Note

Scope and Content Note

The Carlton Turner collection reflects the broad range of activities and projects initiated and overseen by Turner during his years at the White House. Under his leadership, the Drug Abuse Policy Office was heavily involved in drug awareness, education, and prevention outreach initiatives. It also coordinated discussion and policy on drug law enforcement issues and drug eradication efforts. Turner took an active role in the international aspects of the drug abuse problem, giving many foreign interviews and meeting with heads of state, foreign government officials, and directors of international addiction treatment organizations. The collection also reflects the scientific aspects of drug use and addiction treatment, due to Turner's research background in chemistry and the pharmacology of marijuana.

Turner and his office used the White House Office of Records Management Subject File for many of their filing needs. A significant amount of Turner correspondence and issue papers can be found in FG006-01 (White House Staff), FG006-07 (Office of Policy Development and HE006-01 (Narcotics)).

SERIES 06: OVERSIGHT WORKING GROUP, 1983-1986

This series consists of material relating to the meetings of the White House Oversight Working Group. Material from this Working Group consists of monthly activity reports from federal agencies, as well as some meeting agendas and minutes.

Carlton Turner established the Working Group to monitor federal drug enforcement activities and promote interagency communication. The group was composed of senior officials from the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Customs Service, the Coast Guard, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the Department of State, the Department of Justice Criminal Division, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Department of Defense, the National Institute on Drug Abuse, the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, and the Food and Drug Administration.

For additional material on the Oversight Working Group, November 1986-March 1987, see the Subject File in the Donald Ian Macdonald collection. Turner's work product for November and December 1986 is located in this file. Dick Williams served as the interim coordinator for the group in January 1987, and Ian Macdonald chaired the group as it was winding down in February and March 1987. Because this file also contains Macdonald's work product it was retained in his collection.

SERIES 13: COMIC BOOK PROJECT, 1982-1984

This series contains material relating to the development and distribution of the Teen Titans drug awareness comic books. The comic books were designed to communicate the dangers of drug abuse to elementary school children. The Drug Abuse Policy Office coordinated the project, DC Comics developed the story line and artwork, and private companies funded the production costs. The Keebler Company sponsored the fourth grade book (released in April 1983), the National Soft Drink Association sponsored the sixth grade book (November 1983), and IBM sponsored the fifth grade book through the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth (February 1984). The files consist primarily of correspondence with educators, parents, and children. See Series III (Subject File) for additional material on the comic book project.
